'Getting Ready for School' Workshop for Y1 Parents

This workshop will focus on getting your children ready for school. What parents can establish and maintain throughout the school year in order to help their children develop healthy routines and schedules. Teaching young children key social skills are an important component of their social development as they prepare to enter formal schooling. This is particularly important for year one students as they begin to form new friendships, relationships with their peers and teachers. It is understandable that some children may feel apprehensive starting their new school year as they begin their educational journey. Coming to a new school, meeting new fellow students and teachers can be daunting. It requires courage, perseverance and fortitude on their part. At KJS, our teachers, EAs and support staff work collaboratively to ensure a smooth transition so students can successfully navigate their way through their new learning environment.

Goal: To provide support and assurance to KJS families, This workshop will reinforce positive messages and simple strategies that parents can establish at home with their children. We'll discuss the significance of developing clear norms and expectations. We'll also discuss and dissect the difference between rules versus norms as we teach children important life skills at home and at school. Lastly, we will highlight how the presentation dovetails with KJS AAROW's of success.

Schedule: This workshop will be divided into two sessions First session (September 20) is geared for year 1 parents.
